FOOD FISHES

THE IMPORTANCE OF THEIR PROPAGATION

[From the Boston Advertiser Jan. 31.]

No commission which has to do with the concerns of our State government is more clearly devoted to a good work, or has brought about better results in its way than the commission on Inland fisheries, which has for its aim the restocking of our rivers and lakes with food fishes. Formerly when the population was sparser than now, and river courses were not stopped by the dams of great factories, the best fish were abundant in all our streams, and consequently cheap. This has not been the case lately, and [illegible] population has increased largely, a great resource of cheap and wholesome sustenance has been nearly cut off. The problem presented was in its principal features that of inducing the migratory fishes to return to the streams they had abandoned. Two obstacles were to be overcome, one natural and the other artificial. The latter was of course the dams preventing the fish from ascending the streams, which in fact, was the cause of the other. It is the instinct of many migratory fishes, the shad and the salmon among the rest, to return for breeding purposes to the places where they were spawned. This having been prevented by the building of the dams, it was unlikely that even if fishways were constructed enabling them to get above the dams the fish that had been spawned below the dams would go above. In addition, then, to providing fishways, it was essential to fill the streams above with young fish. This has been accomplished by holding spawn in artificial reservoirs from which the young fish were transplanted to the streams, in confident expectation that when they have returned from sea they would seek the upper waters.

The tenth annual report of the Massachusetts fish commission, just published, contains in an appendix an interesting sketch of the progress of fish-culture in New England, by Colonel Theodore Lyman. It appears that this State was the first of communities on this side of the Atlantic to take action in the matter. Considerable interest having been awakened by reports of the French experiments, the legislature in 1856 authorized the appointment of commissioners to report respecting the artificial propagation of fish. The late Chief Justice Chapman was a member of the commission and wrote the report, which says Mr. Lyman "gave the outline of all that we now know of this subject." But the public were not ripe for action upon the recommendations of the report. Soon the war monopolized attention, and the subject was not again taken up until 1865, and then chiefly because the legislatures of New Hampshire and Vermont had called upon this State to open free passage to migratory fishes through the dams on the Connecticut and Merrimack rivers. A joint committee after hearings at which Judge Bellows of New Hampshire and Professor Agassiz urged the reasonableness of the request reported and recommended the appointment of a commission to report more fully and to confer with commissioners of other States. This commission consisted of Mr. Lyman and Alfred A. Reed. Their report was encouraging rather than sanguine, but the public interest had been so great and the advantages of success were so obvious, that Mr. Lyman and Alfred R. Field were appointed commissioners for five years and charged with the duty of erecting fish-ways around the [illegible] dams of the Connecticut and Merrimack rivers.

The legal and other difficulties in the way of building the fish-ways were easily arranged with the manufacturing companies, except with the Holyoke Company, which contested the right of the commissioners, chiefly on the ground that they had paid damages under their charter to owners of fish-rights above their dam. The case was carried up to the United States Supreme Court, which sustained the decision of the State court and established the following principles: A river is a public way. The passage of migratory fish in a river is a public right. Whoso builds a dam must furnish a passage to migratory fish unless exempted by the legislature. The decision of the case against the company finally turned upon the curious point that the building of the dams was an injury to the fish-rights below the dams, which were injured by their consequent loss as well as the ones above, by cutting off their upper spawning, and for this no compensation had been given. The first fish-ways built proved to be not well adapted to the purpose, but those of later construction afford better promise.

In 1867 the powers of the commission were enlarged by interdicting the taking of shad, alewives and salmon in the Merrimack for four years, and by empowering the commissioners to open all possible streams to the passage of fish, appropriating $10,000 to be used in restocking rivers and ponds with valuable fish. Similar appropriations have been made annually since, and this branch of the commissioners' work has been the most important by far. In 1869 a general law regulating inland fisheries was passed, by which the number of commissioners was increased to three, their powers were expressly defined and the whole subject of fish propagation and fishing rights made subject to clear provisions. Since that time the work has gone steadily forward. If the results are not yet as valuable as the more sanguine hoped for, they are, nevertheless, important, and likely to be still more important in the future. Interest in the subject has spread throughout the country. Eleven States, besides all the New England States, have established fish commissions similar to that of Massachusetts, and the general government also has a commission devoted to the subject. The work already accomplished is thus summed up by Mr. Lyman:—

"The commissioners on Inland fisheries, during the ten years of their existence, have not been a costly board, and in especial the item of salaries has been a very small one. They found the people of this State profoundly ignorant about shore and river fisheries, and as apathetic as ignorant. To-day the people are instructed in the matter, and are thoroughly aware of its importance. By careful experiments and by wise legislation, our fisheries are already improved. Shad in the Connecticut, and smelts all along our coast, have been restored to their former abundance. The crop of alewives has been much increased; black bass have been spread in the chief waters of the Commonwealth; half a dozen species of trout and salmon have been bred and placed in proper streams; a great number of ponds have been leased and stocked; the law of dams and of fishways has been established by the highest courts; and finally, the diminution of our shore fisheries has been proved and its causes and a remedy pointed out. This last investigation is alone worth all the expense and labor of the commission. Most important of all is the general and healthy growth of public interest in pisciculture—not here alone but in the whole country. A great deal is yet to be learned, but we are on the good road to find out how many fish may be taken and [illegible] have enough for seed."

The State has a hatching house at Winchester where eggs of different kinds of fish are received and hatched, and at the proper time the young fish are distributed to the streams and ponds selected. Eighty thousand spawn of California salmon were received at Winchester last October, having been presented by Professor Baird, United States commissioner. Of these about 75,000 hatched producing healthy young fish which will be, if they have not already been distributed to various streams. It is believed this fish will be a great acquisition.

THURSDAY, FEB. 3, 1876.

Republican National Convention, 1876.

The next Republican National Convention for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States will be held in the CITY OF CINCINNATI, on WEDNESDAY, THE FOURTEENTH DAY OF JUNE, 1876, at 12 o'clock noon, and will consist of delegates from each State equal to twice the number of its Senators and Representatives in Congress, and of two delegates from each organized Territory and the District of Columbia.

In calling the conventions for the election of delegates, the committees of the several States are recommended to invite all Republican electors, and all other voters, without regard to past political differences or previous party affiliations, who are opposed to reviving sectional issues, and desire to promote friendly feeling and permanent harmony throughout the country by maintaining and enforcing all the constitutional rights of every citizen, including the full and free exercise of the right of suffrage without intimidation and without fraud; who are in favor of the continued prosecution and punishment of all official dishonesty, and of an economical administration of the Government by honest, faithful and capable officers, who are in favor of making such reforms in government as experience may from time to time suggest; who are opposed to impairing the credit of the nation by depreciating any of its obligations, and in favor of sustaining in every way the national faith and financial honor; who hold that the common school system is the nursery of American liberty, and should be maintained absolutely free from sectarian control; who believe that, for the promotion of these ends, the direction of the Government should continue to be confided to those who adhere to the principles of 1776, and support them as incorporated in the Constitution and the laws; and who are in favor of recognizing and strengthening the fundamental principle of National Unity in this Centennial Anniversary of the birth of the Republic.

E. D. MORGAN, Chairman,
WM. E. CHANDLER, Secretary,
Republican National Committee.
Washington, January 13, 1876.

THE PRESIDENCY.

The committee appointed by the Legislative caucus to organize a Republican State Central Campaign Club, held a meeting on Tuesday evening, at which a plan was matured, which will be reported to a general caucus this evening. The organization will probably be called the Blaine Club, each county delegation to select a member, and the Club to choose officers and executive committee. The work of the campaign will be commenced vigorously at once, and steps have already been taken to establish a Maine headquarters in Cincinnati. Intelligence from all parts of the country shows that Mr. Blaine's prospects are improving every day.

NOW INVESTIGATE!

The public have noticed the promptness with which the Republicans have met the Democratic demand for investigation of the electioneering charges concerning the sale of the College Land Scrip, and the liberality with which Speaker Hale gave the House minority four Democrats on a committee of seven. The Democrats are Messrs Bass, Pike, Anderson and Kimball, and the Republicans Messrs. Shepherd, Powers and Haynes. The Senate has joined three members, Messrs. Swazey and Wheelwright, Republicans, and Donworth, Democrat.

Now we want to see these Democratic investigators prosecute their work with activity and zeal. The character of the Republicans on the Committee warrants the promise that they will lend every aid in getting at all the facts, and the public will be interested in the result of this Democratic opportunity to substantiate charges which have been bandied about by that party for several years. And just in this connection, would it be out of place to suggest that the Democrats ought in justice to consider Dr. Jordan for their next nomination, in view of the fact that he invented the only party war-cry of the last campaign, and that the party leaders in the Legislature have been obliged to fall back upon it as their only stock in trade?

SPLITTING UPON THE FINANCIAL ROCK.

A correspondent of that organic Democratic journal, the N. Y. World, reports Mr. Morrison, the Chairman of the Ways and Means, as saying to him:

"My young friend, the Democratic party might as well give up all thoughts of reconciling sections in time for the coming Presidential contest. The party has tried to reconcile heretofore, and every effort has been a failure, and hurt us more than all other influences combined."

This dominant leader was pathetically referring to the discordance of views in his party on the financial question, and we think he is justified in despairing of efforts to reconcile the sections of Democracy on that issue. Some of the more hopeful ones, however, thought that another attempt to straddle the currency fence might be made, and a caucus of Democratic Representatives was held on Tuesday evening to get at a policy. It was a lively affair, but as a "reconciling" effort proved a melancholy failure. Quintus Curtius Lamar, of Mississippi, the Democratic head-centre, announced a "Committee on Consultation" known as the "Council of Safety," designed to prevent hot-headed Democrats from precipitating troublesome issues; and also one or two other committees to keep the majority in the traces. Then came the tug of war on the financial question. Landers, of Indiana, offered his inflation greenback resolution, and Bright, of Tennessee, followed in demand for soft money. Hardenbergh, of N. Y., and Payne, of Ohio, championed hard money, but trod gently on the corns of the inflationists. Holman, of Indiana, came to the support of Landers and greenbacks, and Schleicher, of Texas, sharply rejoined, bringing on a hot debate in which Cox, Randall, Schleicher, Payne and Landers participated. Holman came up again with a vigorous defence of Landers' inflation policy, and finally Hereford, of W. Va., offered a resolution postponing the introduction of any financial propositions in the House by Democrats for twenty days, and that all such measures should be first submitted to the Council of Safety. Without action upon this, the irreconcilable caucus adjourned until next week.

There were ninety-seven Democratic members present, and the result shows that the party has and can have no definite policy as to the finances. The Speaker of the House, who has been claimed as a hard money man, is reported, by the Boston Post as expressing himself in the caucus in favor of repealing the specie resumption act, but had nothing else to offer. And these are the men who ask to be placed in control of the finances of the Nation!

There was a large attendance of spectators in the House at Augusta on Tuesday, to listen to the debate on the interest bill. Mr. Haynes spoke first and his effort is highly complimented. The Press correspondent says he is "a ready and forcible speaker, and received the close attention of the House." The same writer says of the next speaker: "Mr. Powers' speech was undoubtedly the best effort he has ever made in the House. His argument was fair, cogent and his manner most effective." Mr. Lynch, of Machias, who followed, quite surprised the House, as a speaker, "and made even more of his side than did Mr. Pike."

A TROUBLESOME DEMOCRAT.

[From the New York Times.]

Not the least of the troubles of the Democratic majority in the House is that of Mr. Franklin Landers, of the Seventh District of Indiana. He was elected to Congress by a strong inflation constituency, as a Democrat who represented the financial views of that portion of his party. He is new to Congress, but he has already shown himself to be a man of great elasticity, pertinacity, and power of lungs. He has been sat upon with industry, Messrs. Kerr, Holman, Niblack, and Hendricks having taken turns in attempting to suppress him utterly; but in vain. Landers evidently is of the stuff of which martyrs and reformers are made. His opinions, such as they are, are his own, and, what is more to the purpose, he comes conscientiously by them, and there is nothing in the Constitution or the laws that can stop him from proclaiming them in season and out of season.

As everybody knows, the "slate" of the astute Indiana managers includes ex-Governor Hendricks as the Democratic candidate for President, and Mr. Holman for Governor of Indiana. When some indiscreet person mentioned Mr. Kerr as a possible Democratic candidate for President, the Speaker joyfully embraced that opportunity to hasten into print with the nomination of Mr. Hendricks. If some other equally indiscreet friend should next week suggest that Mr. Kerr would make an admirable Governor, that gentleman would doubtless be happy to tell the world how much better his friend, Mr. Holman, would appear at the head of the Democratic State ticket. But Mr. Landers has other views. In fact, he has a laudable ambition himself to be Governor, and he has many supporters in his own State, who not only approve his inflation views, but think he ought to be elected to the Governorship on that single issue. It is the policy of the Indiana delegation to steer clear of all such troublesome questions as finance. Mr. Hendricks, who is sometimes spoken of as "a man without heart," has financial opinions, but seeing that they might be in the way in any preliminary canvass, he keeps them locked up in his manly breast. Mr. Holman, however, is for soft money. He would not like to say so, unless under pressure. Mr. Landers proposes to put him put him under pressure when he gets a chance, and Speaker Kerr is determined that Landers shall not have any such chance, if he can help it.

The situation is an interesting one. Last Monday week, for example, Mr. Landers, who has been carrying in his hat, ever since Congress met, a series of inflammatory resolutions on the subject of finance, told Speaker Kerr that he would present them that day. Would the Speaker recognize him when he offered this torch? The Speaker was evidently nonplussed with Landers. He was not sure whether he would recognize him or not. Mr. Landers rose at the appointed time, and not only rose, but stalked into the aisle in front of the Speaker's desk, where he brandished his bunch of firebrands, and bawled in stentorian tones "Mr. Speaker! Mr. Speaker!" The much-entreated Speaker looked directly over the head of Landers and blandly "recognized" a gentleman, who had no combustibles about him. The zealous soft-money representative Democrat sat down with a cloud on his brow. Mr. Landers says, with much show of reason, that his party—the Democratic Party of Indiana—is with him in his soft-money opinions, and that the Speaker's refusal to let him be heard in the House is an invasion of his rights. Certainly he knows what he is talking about, for his attitude in the House is one of competition for Democratic support in his own State, as against Holman, who thinks to "ride two horses" on this question.

It is uncomfortable to have in this house a man who persists in saying just what he thinks. Therefore Landers is regarded by many cautious Democrats with undisguised dismay. If he keeps on, the whole financial question will be opened in Congress, and then, what will become of the Democratic Party? All the bluster about retrenchment and reform answers well enough to fill the air and distract attention from real troubles, but it cannot last forever, and Mr. Landers, for one, thinks this a proper time for his party to come out vigorously in favor of an indefinite expansion of the currency. He is confident that the Democratic majority in the House is with him, and why should he not run up his flag? If the Speaker continues to look over the head of Landers, he makes a martyr of him, and that will help Landers and hurt Holman. But if he permits him to lead the cohorts of soft-money in the House, the "slate" is broken, and Landers is nominated for Governor of Indiana. This domestic dispute has finally compelled the calling of a Democratic Congressional caucus, concerning which we shall probably hear more.

MAINE'S CANDIDATE.

[From the Lewiston Journal.]

The Republican press of Maine have most heartily responded to the resolution of the Republican legislative caucus in favor of Mr. Blaine as the Republican candidate for the Presidency. In addition to the Republican papers already referred to we notice that the Rockland Free Press, Eastport Sentinel, Presque Isle Sunrise, Belfast Age and Somerset Reporter, Farmington Chronicle, Oxford Democrat, Piscataquis Observer, Bath Times, Biddeford Journal and Ellsworth American, give expression to the united voice of Maine Republicans in this direction.

A correspondent of The Chicago Tribune writes that there are two Blaine men among the Wisconsin Republicans to one for Washburne, and not one in 50 for Morton, and adds: "Indeed, Morton was never popular in Wisconsin, and if he is a candidate for the Presidency I warn him not to build hopes on getting the votes of the Badger State. Blaine has made immense headway by his recent speeches in the House, and it is only occasionally that a man is found who is sorry the amnesty debate occurred, or regrets that Blaine stirred up the animals with a long pole, and made them growl in the old secession key. I presume there will be no effort to instruct the delegates from this State, but the indications now are that they will be for Blaine first."

A FAVORABLE FINANCIAL EXHIBIT.—The debt statement for January shows a marked improvement in the finances of the Government as compared with the statement of the preceding month, and a still greater improvement when compared with the statement of January, 1875. Nor is this all. During the seven months of the present fiscal year the Treasury cash balance is greater by six millions than at the end of the corresponding seven months of the last fiscal year, while the decrease in the national debt during the past seven months exceeds the decrease made in the same months of last year over nine and a half millions. During the twelve months ending January 31, 1876, the decrease in legal tenders has been eleven millions. In the same period the fractional currency has increased about eight hundred thousand dollars.

Charles Worms has been arrested in Canada for an alleged forgery of an Indian contract in the United States, and is held at Montreal for extradition.—Exchange.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Mr. Hunter of Virginia has reported from the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions a bill to amend the act of 1871, pensioning soldiers of 1812, restoring to the rolls names stricken therefrom on account of disloyalty.

The Legislature of Kansas last week adopted resolutions thanking Messrs. Blaine, Garfield and others for the stand they took in regard to Jeff. Davis while the amnesty question was under consideration of the House.

The Boston Post's special says: "A pretty thorough canvass among Congressmen develops the fact that the proposition of the Appropriation Committee of the House to reduce the salaries of Congressmen from five thousand to four and one-half thousand dollars will be defeated."

Mr. Whyte, one of the Democratic Senators from Maryland, has introduced resolutions into the Senate declaring this government a "confederated Republic."

The celebrated "Gray Nuns" bill, qualifying Catholic sisters of the order to act as teachers in the public schools, has been repealed in the New York Legislature.

The Congregationalist thinks that Mr. Blaine has done a good work in developing an amount of treason still latent in men from the South occupying seats on the floors of Congress, of which it is of great consequence for all loyal men to be aware.

The Virginia Republican Association, after declaring in favor of Mr. Blaine, appointed a committee to prepare an address to the people of their State, setting forth his services, and their confidence in his ability, integrity, and sound Republican patriotism.

Five of the Republican journals of Iowa, including those that are most influential in the party, favor the nomination of ex-Speaker Blaine for President by the Republican National Convention.

The Rome, Ga., Commercial publishes Bob Toombs's recent rampant and rebellious speech in full and says:

"God knows, we have striven hard with the perverse nature that is in us to be reconciled and harmonious, but since Blaine's hyena speech, and the indorsement that followed it, we say, all hail, Bob Toombs."

The Cincinnati Gazette's Washington correspondent says the difficulty with the Democrats in carrying out their investigation programme is that they find the work already done up by the Republicans themselves.

So here is the Louisville Courier-Journal which claims to be above all partisan bias, saying: "As a matter of fact, the best intelligence of the South adopts, and reiterates every word of Mr. Hill's manly utterances upon the floor of the Lower House of Congress."

So, too, the Mobile Register, edited by John Forsyth, says: "Every Southern man indorses Mr. Hill's speech thoroughly. He told the truth fully and boldly in response to a vile slander which is trying to make itself history."

Never since the adoption of the Constitution has there been so little legislation perfected during the first two months of the session, and, at the present rate, Congress will be in session on the day of the centennial jubilee.

Congressman Tufts of Iowa writes to a friend that his seat is between Mr. Blaine and Mr. W. S. King, and adds that he "hopes to absorb a little statesmanship from one, and a little subsidy from the other."

The Boston Journal's special writer: "Western Republicans say that arrangements have been made to send Blaine delegates to the National Convention from Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota and Missouri."

The Davenport (Iowa) Democrat says it is almost certain that the Legislature of that State will restore the death penalty for murder.

A Washington paper says it is glad to hear that ex-Senator Trumbull is talked of for Governor of Illinois. There is something or other about Trumbull that is as imposing as the presence of a stuffed lion.

The schooner Ralph Howes from Belfast Me., for Baltimore, is ashore on Cape Henlopen and will have to discharge part of her cargo.

DENTAL CARD.

DR. J. F. BABCOCK desires to say to that class of sufferers who are afflicted with aching teeth that in almost every instance, the pain can be instantly relieved, and that with from three to five further painless treatments the tooth may be filled and permanently restored to health. In support of his assertion Dr. B. would say that in no single instance has he ever failed to save every aching tooth which he has attempted to save, and during the past four years there have been by actual count six hundred and thirty of them. However, defective teeth should never be neglected until they ache, but upon the first appearance of decay they should at once be properly, and so permanently, filled with some suitable material—absolutely pure gold being pre-eminently the best. Since 1871, Dr. Babcock has placed in such teeth more than three thousand gold fillings, and it is with much pride that he makes the statement that, to the best of his knowledge, but three fillings only out of that large number have proved defective.

A Reported Hiatus in the Postal Accounts for 1869 and 1870.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2. Washington specials indicate that the House Committee on Post Office expenditures has discovered a hiatus in the postal accounts for the years 1869 and 1870. In 1869 a balance was reported on hand, amounting to $1,019,850, but this item does not appear in any form in the report of the following year, nor is any explanation offered by the Sixth Auditor's office The committee discover that the Sixth Auditor's books show that at the date when the balance of $1,019,559 was reported on hand, the balance actually amounted to $1,900. This also lacks explanation. J. W. McGrew, who during this period was first clerk in the Sixth Auditor's office, and whose name is now before the Senate for confirmation as Sixth Auditor, seems to be the only person likely to give the necessary information, and he is sick, but is expected before the committee soon as sufficiently recovered

THE UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

Services on Yesterday The Sermon by Rev Mr Grant of Waterville

Notwithstanding the severe storm yesterday forenoon, a considerable number both male and female assembled in the Universalist church at half past 10 o'clock for church services

After the preliminary services of singing by the congregation and a good prayer by Rev Mr Hodgdon of Pittsfield, the audience listened to a very interesting and instructive sermon by Rev Mr Grant of Waterville from the text "As he thinketh in his heart so is he" [illegible] the power of [illegible] religious [illegible] We are the creatures of [illegible] to a [illegible] extent and our lives and thoughts are moulded largely by our surrounding influences It is by no means certain that any of us would think as he [illegible] under other circumstances, [illegible] education is the sum of ideas [illegible] as well as true knowledge but it is always certain that useful knowledge [illegible] downward, will [illegible] upward [illegible] a higher plane Our thoughts [illegible] what we think in our hearts—[illegible] to the surface sooner or later and therefore it behoves us to be sure that our [illegible] thoughts are always pure and gallant It is the duty of every one to [illegible] a person [illegible]

The speaker proposed [illegible] with all his power the [illegible] doctrines of the faith [illegible] the final happiness of all mankind as the product of the [illegible] of good [illegible] the spirit will eventually lift up the lost [illegible] soul to a heavenly purity [illegible] doctrine always re-acts upon its believer producing its kind In the progress of thought [illegible] heterodoxy of one [illegible] often becomes the orthodoxy of another Our [illegible] it is the re[illegible] highest appreciation of the [illegible] attributes of God Our duty therefore is to cultivate the highest and grandest conception of those attributes. The fatherhood of God is the [illegible] of all [illegible] the name of Father [illegible] higher than that of King, Sovereign or Lord [illegible] the paternal attributes of God toward our immortal souls All barriers of olden time are broken down and we stand on common ground with other denominations in all works of charity [illegible] We [illegible] that [illegible] be [illegible] by the hand of love [illegible] and a [illegible] of love Other denominations preach their distinctive doctrines and [illegible] their creeds and do not thank us for misrepresenting them as preaching our doctrine They only are Universalists worthy of the name who live their doctrine before the world [illegible] as they [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] therefore rest upon those who can [illegible] that better faith to bring forth the fruits of love and good will and they should invoke the aid of our Heavenly Father upon all our labors of charity and for the amelioration and elevation of mankind

The meeting was greatly enjoyed by all present and closed with [illegible] expressions of satisfaction

Abuse of Shade Trees

Mr Editor When a young man walked from Broadway to [illegible] street on State street with an axe or a hatchet in his hands and inflicted a cut upon almost every tree by the side of the sidewalk we felt grieved because some of the young trees planted last summer cannot receive such wounds without injury and in some cases death We felt grieved that a man resided in Bangor so reckless or so malicious as to injure the property which individual citizens at their own expense and in part for the public benefit as well as their own, had placed in a public street with careful planting and watering during the parched days of last summer

This dispensation we say was grievous to be borne but was not so thoroughly provoking as to see three full-grown men in charge of a city team sprinkling sand upon the side-walk and carelessly driving their sled against tree after tree, scraping the bark off, whilst the width of the sidewalk between the fence and the tree was three feet in excess of the width of the sled, allowing, with any ordinary exercise of care, the free passage of the sled without coming nearer than a foot or foot and a half to a tree

The provoking feature of this second calamity is that we are assessed to pay taxes to pay men to destroy trees which we last year spent money in planting and preserving.

We do not claim that every man who shovels dirt for this city should have a degree from a college, but we do claim that the man who hires our laborers should be a man of intelligence, a true care for our city and private property, and should impress upon his subordinates such ideas as shall encourage rather than discourage the planting of trees by the roadside and the building of fences agreeable to the eye.

Probably the multitude and beauty of our ornamental shade trees in Bangor which is remarked by strangers, is due to John S. Sayward, a former editor of your paper and to his utterances in the paper, more than to any other man or influence. He allowed no opportunity to escape of urging citizens to "plant trees by the roadside," but what would his counsels and labors have availed, if blunderers who scattered gravel and managed snow-plows in the winter had destroyed what citizens planted in the summer?

Two years ago my neighbor S. planted a tree by the side-walk. A vandal cut it and it died. Last year he replaced it, and I saw him water it on an average four times a week during the summer. Last week a city employe was seen to drive his gravel cart on the side-walk against the tree and strip it of bark so that it must again be replaced, and this led to following the track of the sled and questioning others who watched it, and we find that all up and down the street we are

CONSUMPTIVES, TAKE NOTICE.—Every moment of delay makes your cure more hopeless, and much depends on the judicious choice of a remedy. The amount of testimony in favor of Dr Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup as a cure for consumption far exceeds all that can be brought to support the pretensions of any other medicine. See Dr Schenck's Almanac containing the certificates of many persons of the highest respectability who have been restored to health after being pronounced incurable by physicians of acknowledged ability. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone has cured many, as these evidences will show but the cure is often promoted by the employment of two other remedies which Dr Schenck provides for the purpose These additional remedies are Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills By the timely use of these medicines, according to directions, Dr Schenck certifies that most any case of Consumption may be cured. Dr Schenck is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch Sts., Philadelphia every Monday, where all letters for advice must be addressed

THE OLD SHIP OF STATE.

BY DAVID BARKER.

O'er the dark and the gloomy horizon that bounds her,
Thro' the storm and the night and the hell that surrounds her,
I can see with a faith which immortals have given,
Burning words blazing out o'er the portals of heaven.
"SHE WILL LIVE!"

Not a part of the freight that our forefathers gave her,
We must cast to the deep yawning waters to save her,—
'Tis the chain for the slave we must fling out to lighten her,
'Tis the brand and the whip we must yield up to right her.
She will live.

CLEAN THE DECKS OF THE [illegible]—if opposed by the owner,
Hurl the wretch to the wave, as they hurled over Jonah.
With a "FREEDOM TO ALL," gleaming forth from our banner,
Let the tyrant yet learn we have freemen to man her.
She will live.

She will live while a billow is swelling before her,
She will live while the blue arch of heaven bends o'er her,
While the name of a Christ to the fallen we cherish,
Till the hopes in the breast of humanity perish,
She will live.

ROSE LODGE.

It looked the prettiest place imaginable, lying under the sunlight, as we stood that first morning in front of the bay. The water was smooth and displayed lovely colors, now green, now blue, as the clouds passed over the face of the sky, now taking tinges of brown and amber, and toward evening it would be pink and purple. Further on the waters were rippling and shining in the sun. Fishing vessels stood out at sea, plying their craft, little cockle-shells, their white sails set, disported on it, rowing-boats glided hither and thither. In the distance the grand waves of the sea were ebbing and flowing; a noble merchantman, all her canvas filled, was passing proudly on her outward-bound course.

"I should like to live here," cried Tod, turning away at last.

And I'm sure I felt that I should! For I could watch the ever-changing sea from morning to night, and not tire of it.

"Suppose we remain here, Johnny?"

"To live?"

"Nonsense, lad! For a month. I am going for a sail. Will you come?"

After the terrible break-up of our boating tour we came to this little place, Cray Bay, which was on the sea-coast, a few miles beyond Templemore. Our pleasure cut short at the beginning of the holiday, we hardly knew what to do with the rest of it, and felt like two fish suddenly thrown out of water. At Cray Bay we found one small inn which bore the odd sign of the Whistling Wind, and was kept by Mrs. Jones, a stout Welshwoman. The bedroom enjoyed a look-out at some stables, and would not hold much more than the two small beds in it, and she said she could not give us a better.

The discomforts of the lodging were forgotten when we strolled out to look about us, and saw the beauties of the sea and bay. Cray Bay was a very primitive spot, little else but a better-most fishing-place. It had not then been found out by the tour-taking world. Its houses were built anyhow and anywhere, its shops could be counted on your fingers, a butcher's, a baker's, a grocer's, and so on. Fishermen called at the doors with fish, and country women with butter and fowls. There was no gas, and the place at night was lighted with oil-lamps. A trout stream lay at the back of the village, half a mile away.

Stepping into a boat on this first morning, after the sail proposed by Tod, we found its owner a talkative old fellow. His name was Druff, he said; he lived at Cray Bay most of his life, and knew every inch of its land and every wave of its sea. There couldn't be a nicer spot to stop in summer, as he took it, no, not if you search the island through; and he supposed it was first called Cray Bay after the cray-fish, they being caught in plenty there.

"More things than one are called oddly in this place," remarked Tod. "Look at that inn, the Whistling Wind! what's that after?"

"And so the wind do hoostle on this here coast, 'deed an' it do," returned Druff. "You'd not forget it if you heered it in Winter."

The more we saw of Cray Bay that day, the more we liked it. And Tod made up his mind to stay for a time if lodgings could be found.

"But what would they say at home to our staying here?" I asked the next morning at breakfast.

"What they chose," said Tod, cracking his fourth egg.

"I am afraid the Pater—"

"Now, Johnny, you need not put in your word," he interrupted, in the off-hand tone that always silenced me. "It's not your affair. We came out for a month, and I am not going back home, like a bad sixpence returned before the month has expired. Perhaps I shall talk a few weeks on to it. I am not dependent on the Pater's purse."

No, for he had his two hundred pounds lying untouched at the Worcester Old Bank, and his check-book in his pocket.

Breakfast over, we went out to look for lodgings, but soon feared it might be a hopeless search. Two little cottages had a hand-board stuck on a stick in the garden with "Lodgings" on it. But the rooms in each proved to be a tiny sitting-room and a more tiny bed-room, smaller than the garret at the Whistling Wind.

"I never saw such a world as this," cried Tod. "If you want a thing you can't get it. Oh, by George! Look there Johnny!"

We had come to the last house in the place—a fresh looking, charming cottage, with a low roof and a green veranda, that we had stopped to admire yesterday. It faced the bay, and stood in a garden that was a perfect bower of roses. The green gate bore the name "Rose Lodge," and in a parlor window appeared a notice "To Let," which had not been there the previous day.

"Fancy their having rooms to let here!" cried Tod. "How lucky!"

In he went impulsively, striding up the short gravel path, and knocked at the door. It was opened by a tall grenadier of a female, rising six feet, with a spare figure and a sour face. She had a large cooking apron on, dusted with flour.

"You have lodgings to let," said Tod. "Can I see them?"

"Lodgings to let?" she repeated, scanning us up and down attentively; and her voice sounded harsh and rasping. "I don't know that we have. You had better see Captain Copperas."

She threw open the door of the parlor, a small square bright-looking room, with a gay carpet, a cottage piano, and green chairs.

Captain Copperas came forward; a retired seaman, as we heard later, taller than the grenadier, with a brown, weather-beaten face. But in voice and manners, he at any rate, did not resemble her, for they were just as pleasant as they could be.

"I have no lodgings," said he. "My house is to let, and the furniture to be taken too."

Which announcement was of course a vast check upon Tod. He sat, looking very blank, and then explained that we only required lodgings for a month or so.

"It's a pity but you wanted a little house," said Captain Copperas. "This is the most compact, desirable, perfect little dwelling mortal man was ever in. Rent twenty-six pounds a year only, furniture to be bought out-and-out for a hundred and twenty-five. It would be a little Eden—a Paradise—to those who had the means to take it."

As he spoke he regarded us individually and rather pointedly. It looked as much as to doubt whether we had the means. Tod—conscious of his five hundred pounds in the bank—threw his head up.

"Oh, I have the means," said he, as haughtily as you please. "Johnny, did you put any cards in your pocket? Give Captain Copperas one."

I laid one of Tod's cards on the table. The Captain took it up.

"It is a great grief to me to leave the house," he remarked. "Especially, after having just settled in it, and laying-in a stock of the best furniture in a plain way, purchased in the best market. Downright grief."

"Then why do you leave it?" naturally asked Tod.

"Because I have to go afloat again," said the sailor, his face taking a rueful expression. "I thought I had given up the sea for good; but my old employers won't let me give it up. They know my value as a master, and have offered me large terms for another year or two of service. A splendid new East Indiaman, two thousand tons register, and—and in short, I don't like to be ungrateful, so I have said I'll go."

"Could you not keep on the house until you come back?"

"My sister won't let me keep it on; [illegible]. Truth to say, she never cared for the sea and wants to get away from it. That exquisite scene"—extending his hand toward the bay, and to a steamer, working her way near the horizon—"has no charms for Miss Copperas. No: I can only give the place up, and dispose of the furniture. It will be a fine sacrifice. I shall not get the one half of the money I gave for it; don't look so."

I could read Tod's face as a book, and the eager look in his eyes. He was thinking how much he should like to seize upon the tempting bargain; to make the pretty room we sat in, and the prettier prospect yonder, his own. Captain Copperas appeared to read him also.

"You are doubting whether to close with the offer, or no not," he said, with a frank smile. "You might make it yours for a hundred and twenty-five pounds. Perhaps—pardon me! you are both but young—you may not have the sum readily at command?"

"Oh, yes, I have," said Tod, candidly. "I have it lying at my banker's, in Worcester. No. It's not for that reason I hesitate. It is—"

LETTER CARRIERS.

All letters are delivered free by carriers when addressed to street and number. People should inform their correspondents of above and have their letters addressed accordingly.

Persons leaving their address at the General Delivery can also have their letters sent, but it is much more convenient to have the street and number on, and they will be delivered earlier than if the same is put on at the office. Carriers make two deliveries daily, the first trip supplying the extremes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening in season for important mails—the down town boxes fifteen and the up town boxes thirty minutes before closing mails at the office.

Holidays the Carrier's Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8½ to 9½ A. M., and from 7½ to 8½ P. M. Sundays from 8½ to 9½ A. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office.

ENVELOPES.

No additional charge will be made for printing the name and request to return, across the left hand upper corner of the envelopes furnished by the Post Office Department, (samples of which may be seen at the Cashier's window,) when ordered in lots of not less than 500.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if unclaimed within thirty days, or less, written or printed, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, on the face side, will be complied with.

The public are earnestly recommended to procure Stamped envelopes with printed return request, as the expense is less, and letters thus endorsed, if not delivered to the person addressed, are returned to the writer free of charge.

First class envelopes of above furnished at $37.80 per thousand.

Stamps cut from Stamped Envelopes cannot be used to prepay postage. The use of such stamps is punishable by a fine of fifty dollars.
